

ENVIRONMENTAL COMPLIANCE – WEEE

The Waste Electronic and Electrical Equipment (WEEE) Directive is one of the extended producer responsibility (EPR) regulations in the European Union which obliges producers to take financial and/or physical responsibility for the treatment and disposal of their products and packaging at end-of-life.

If your company is placing electronic and electrical equipment onto the market in Europe, then it can be a complex and time-consuming task to ensure you comply with the regulations in all the relevant markets. As more and more countries follow Europe's regulatory approach, and introduce improved EPR legislation, the challenge becomes global.
